

Cardiac tamponade after a systemic-pulmonary shunt complicated by serous leakage.

Authors: Garcia-Guereta L., Burgueros M., Borches D., Gonzalez V., Jimenez J.

Publication Date: 1997

Abstract:

A newborn baby with complex congenital heart disease had severe persistent pericardial effusion after a systemic-pulmonary shunt. Pericardiocentesis and pericardiotomy could not stop pericardial leakage. At reoperation, topical application of a fibrin glue resulted in resolution of the leak and avoided replacement of the graft.